

Skillful technique

Technique 2 Haratori

Jumps into the opponent's bosom and attacks toward the stomach. If this technique is effective, it is a one-shot special move that usually ends the game. Agility and instantaneous power are important, and bulls that are good at this are very popular with fans.

Technique 1 Oshi (Push)

Push in a straight line with force from the front. A powerful bull pushes the opponent into a corner and decides the game.

The types of attacks are roughly divided into 5 moves: "Wali/Tsuki", "Kake", "Oshi(Push)", "Haratori", and "Motasekomi". The bulls take advantage of their unique physiques and horns to use techniques effectively to face the opponent.

Technique 3 Motasekomi

A technique that puts weight on the opponent. Like the clinch in boxing, it is often done for defensive purposes to avoid pushing the opponent. Some bulls actively set this up and use brain play to exhaust their opponents.

Technique 4 Tsuki, Wari

Tsuki: A blow that damages the opponent by hitting the horn between the eyebrows. Techniques like jabs and straights in boxing.

Wari: A striking technique that aims at the opponent's side and hits the corner like a hook. It is more effective if he aims at the temple, which is a vital point.

Technique 5 Kake

A technique that hangs the horn and twists the neck. It is also effective as a defense to block the opponent's blows, and it makes him difficult to fight because it is hard to breathe and sustain his giant body. It is said that a bull that is good at Kake will win.

Tactics between a bull and a bullfighter

By "Yegui", bullfighters fire bulls up with shouting and they take turns one by one. While checking the condition of the bulls, they plan the timing of the game and encourage them.